-----Cursor

down vote

This is the simplest example of the SQL Server Cursor. I have used this all the time for any use of Cursor in my T-SQL.

DECLARE @AccountID INT
DECLARE @getAccountID CURSOR SET @getAccountID = CURSOR FOR SELECT Account_ID
FROM Accounts
OPEN @getAccountID
FETCH NEXT
FROM @getAccountID INTO @AccountID
WHILE @@FETCH_STATUS = 0
BEGIN
FETCH NEXT
FROM @getAccountID INTO @AccountID
END

CLOSE @getAccountID

DEALLOCATE @getAccountID

<http://www.kodyaz.com/t-sql/nested-cursor-in-sql-server-2008.aspx>

However, the @@FETCH_STATUS is global to all cursors on a connection, therefore using @@FETCH_STATUS to control nested cursors may not be advisable. To play it safe for the case of following triple nested cursors demonstration, we avoid using @@FETCH_STATUS. Instead we order the SELECTs for the cursor and find the max value on one unique column. We use a comparison between the running values and maximum value to control the loop. The OUTER cursor loop is based on OrderDate. The MIDDLE cursor loop is based PurchaseOrderID-s received on a particular date. The INNER cursor loop is based on the products belonging to a particular PurchaseOrderID.

This is the entire triple nested cursors T-SQL script:

-- MSSQL nested cursors
USE AdventureWorks
GO
DECLARE @DateIteration DATETIME,
        @IterationID INT,
        @OrderDetail VARCHAR(1024),
        @ProductNo VARCHAR(10)

                PurchaseOrderID INT,
                OrderDetail VARCHAR(1024)
DECLARE curOrderDate CURSOR FOR

SELECT @MaxOrderDate = OrderDate

Description

The source code shows how to use Regular Expressions in C#. The code Functions w ritten for Validation Alphabet, AlphaNumeric, Integer, Postive Integer, Floating point numbers. You just cut copy these functions and use in any program.

Explanation of Regular Expressions:

Regular expressions are used to search specified in the source string.

Examples:

Pattern#1

Regex objNotNaturalPattern=new Regex("[^0-9]");
```

Regex objNaturalPattern=new Regex("0*[1-9][0-9]*");

Pattern#1 will match for strings other than 0 to 9.^ symbol is used for specifying not condition.[] brackets if we are to give range values such as 0 - 9 or a-z or A-Z

eg. abc will return true

123 will return false.

Pattern#2 will match for string which are Natural Numbers.Natural numbers Are numbers which are always greater than 0.The pattern 0* tells that a natural Number can be prefixed with any number of zero's or no zero's.the next [1-9] tells that it should contain atleast one number from 1 to 9 followed by any numbers of 0-9's

Eg. 0007 returns true whereas 00 will return false.

Basic things to be understood in RegEx:

"*" matches 0 or more patterns

"?" matches single character

"^" for ignoring matches.

"[]" for searching range patterns.

More RegEx patterns in Next Article.
